Section 3: Scenario/Case Study

Jamika works as a delivery person. Ms. Jackson, her supervisor, gave Jamika the following instructions:

“I promised some deliveries early this morning. This order has to be on West Street by 10:00. Even though it is on the other side of town, go there first.”

“Here is another one for West Street and it also has to get there early. Wait, Mrs. Smith’s order needs to be delivered right now. She lives on First Street. Do these three first and then finish your normal route. Do you have any questions?”

Section 3: Scenario/Case Study

Jamika did not understand what her supervisor said, but she did not ask for an explanation. She felt comfortable completing the route in her usual order; so she did.

When Jamika got back to the store, Ms. Jackson was angry. She had been apologizing all morning to upset customers who did not get their orders as promised.

Ms. Jackson told Jamika, “One more day like this and you will have to find another job.” Jamika did not understand why Ms. Jackson was so upset. How could it be her fault? Ms. Jackson gave poor directions.
